

Shred-4-Good Helps the Environment

Shred-4-Good is a new social enterprise of Goodwill, Serving the People of Southern Los Angeles County (SOLAC). Businesses and job seekers alike can benefit from Shred-4-Good's new document destruction service. President and CEO Janet McCarthy-Wilson said "It's one more business start-up that will employ additional folks and provide training in an environmental industry."

Since 1929 Goodwill Industries has been a green company - recycling clothing, household goods, televisions and computers, and now, paper. "Goodwill was one of the first green companies. We've been recycling clothing and household goods for close to 80 years – about 100 years internationally." said McCarthy-Wilson.

Shred-4-Good provides secure document destruction services to both the business community and local residents. Shred-4-Good meets all statutory requirements for the protection and destruction of sensitive information of the healthcare, financial, banking, real estate and legal sectors, as well as many other government and business entities. Clients simply arrange a pickup schedule and place their paper waste into Shred-4-Good provided containers. Containers are picked-up on a weekly or monthly schedule depending on the amount of paper that is produced. One-time bulk purge service is also available.

"Revenues we produce will go back into assisting with other programs," McCarthy-Wilson said. "The objective is to create self-sufficiency, so that we don't have to rely on government funding. Now, more than ever, people need job training so they can get back to work." ■
